Our Home

A message from Claire and Al

Welcome to all family and friends to Tasman's family newsletter.

What an autumn it was! – and now we are already halfway through winter. It is always fascinating to see leaves turn from green to brown and the wind start to feel a bit crisp. At the start of autumn, some of our residents planted some bulbs and small trees. We are looking forward to spring to see these blossom.

One of the highlights of the season is celebrating Mother's Day with our residents and their families.

We would like to say a big thank you to everyone who attended our Winter Family Gathering. It is an event we look forward to greatly, and it was lovely to share the experience with so many of you. We hope you liked the yummy afternoon tea that was prepared for you by our cooks. A new cook, Mike, has recently joined our wonderful cook James, in providing delicious and nutritious food to our residents. Mike has extensive experience in a commercial kitchen, and brings a variety of skills to our team here at Tasman. His contribution to the menu is already being appreciated by family members who visit us on a regular basis.

Our Diversional Therapists here at Tasman have been preparing new activities and coaching our Activities Coordinators to ensure that our residents are enjoying a variety of experiences. Regular van outings continue to take place to a variety of destinations, and we look forward to having more social outings this year. Entertainment day every Thursday is a highlight of our week here at Tasman. Our Diversional Therapy team has formed a band called The Jolly Entertainers which consists of members of the staff team as well as several residents.

We have a new committed volunteer who organises the knitting club with our residents once a week. And the consistent visits of Clive and Bella, our pet therapy dogs, continue to bring much joy to our residents. There are many other small diversional therapy activities happening on a daily basis, like baking, reading newspapers, arts and crafts, puzzles and also individual interaction and conversation. The Diversional Therapy team continues to create new activities for residents to engage in.

Music is one of the most powerful languages for people with dementia. We have a wide selection of residents' favourites in different genres, so please let us know if you want to add anything to our playlist on behalf of your loved one here at Tasman.

Many family members will have already welcomed the newest member of the registered nurse team, April Dalisay. Her warm personality and broad experience makes her a valuable and very welcome addition to our family.

We would like to take this opportunity to remind you that if you are bringing in any electrical items to the facility, please ensure that this is tagged and tested by a licensed electrician.

We look forward to welcoming you here at our home during the next few months.

Thoughts on Atul Gawande's "Being Mortal"

Being Mortal: Medicine and What Matters in the End, by Atul Gawande, is a most important book. It challenges us to think about the 'medicalising' of old age and death and what we could offer instead.

With much advance in medicine and surgery, death comes to many people after a long medical struggle with an ultimately unstoppable condition. Ageing and death has become a medical issue. There is often a focus on repairing health, trying to fix and control, rather than sustaining the soul.

People who are sick and/or aged do have priorities beyond staying safe and living longer.

It seems that when we see our future as finite our focus shifts to the here and now, to everyday pleasures and the people closest to us. People want to continue to be "the author of their life", to keep "shaping the story of their life in the world ... by making choices and sustaining connections to others according to their own priorities."

This has been identified as crucial to maintaining the integrity of our lives. This is the "battle of being mortal."

Often older people hand over the decision making to family. The author suggests that family will choose safety above all else. He believes that we want autonomy for ourselves and safety for those we love. We often see this thought process when families are viewing our rest home for a loved one. They ask the unspoken question: "Is this a place I feel comfortable leaving him or her?" instead of "is this a place he or she would like to be?"

The health system and aged care can help people achieve what is most important to them at the end of their lives. It is important to keep people safe, but is this the primary goal of the people we are caring for? Does this primary focus address their hopes and fears? Perhaps not.

In our homes, we want to hear laughter, to see love and friendship, to see joy all over people's faces, to encourage wonderful moments with families, to plant gardens in the sunshine, listen to beautiful music ... and we do. We want to focus on helping people to achieve what is most important to them at the end of their lives.

Accompanying loved ones to appointments

Our residents attend outpatient appointments for a variety of reasons. All residents with dementia require an escort to these appointments, and often people prefer to have a support person with them even if this is not a requirement. Please don't be surprised to receive a phone call from one of our RNs asking you to escort your loved one.

Having a family member escort a resident is a good option for residents as at these appointments health and family history are discussed and there are decisions to be made. If you are happy to attend the appointment but have any concerns, please do not hesitate to discuss this with the registered nurse. He or she will arrange for a staff member to go with you.

If the time of the appointment does not suit you please discuss this also with the RN and they will liaise with the service provider to change the time if possible.

As autumn drew to a close we planted our spring bulbs

We are lucky to have our own in-house band, "The Jolly Entertainers" perform for us twice a week

Communicating with families

Communication with one another is very important, especially when it involves residents in our care – your loved ones. We are often asked how our communication system works.

Sometimes, despite our best efforts, there will be times when a resident sustains an injury, is harmed, or an error occurs. In these instances, or if a resident's condition changes and the doctor has visited, the RN will contact the resident's Welfare Guardian to inform them of the incident. It is then their responsibility to inform other family members.

Multi-disciplinary team meetings are held on a regular basis to fully inform you of your loved ones general condition and care. Again, an invitation to this meeting will be given to the resident's Welfare Guardian. This invitation can then be extended by them to other family members if desired.

Recently our Cooking Club had a family member come in and teach us the trick to icing a cake properly

Safe footwear for older people

We are often asked for advice on the best shoes to choose for elderly people.

Firstly, if the person has foot pain or known foot problems, a doctor or podiatrist should be consulted.

Choosing the correct shoe is important because ill-fitting shoes and shoes with poor contact with the ground or poor grip may upset balance and the way one walks, increasing the risk of falls.

Important points to remember are:

- Buy for fit, not size
- Try out the shoes on a variety of surfaces before buying
- A firm heel cup provides support when walking
- Low, wide heels provide more contact with the ground and prevent slipping

- Thin soles with tread reduce risk of slipping
- A wide, deep toe box allows room for toe movement and comfort
- Choose laces, buckles or Velcro that hold the foot firmly.

In winter we often find our residents return to a lifelong habit of putting on socks at night time to keep their feet warm. This can result in slips and falls during night-time visits to the toilet.

A lovely winter gift for loved ones in residential care is a couple of pairs of cosy bedsocks with special non-slip soles – practical and always received with appreciation and delight.

A message from Andrew

We have chosen a new name for our newsletter, "Our Home". This feels just right to me, as the concept of home is at the centre of our philosophy of care.

Winter is a time when home feels especially important. Standing on the sidelines watching my son George play ripper rugby, my thoughts often turn to our warm home and the cosy evening ahead. Winter here in New Zealand is a time for snuggling with the kids on the sofa reading stories. It's a time for sharing home-made soup by the fire, and teaching the kids about how hot chocolate just isn't hot chocolate without a marshmallow or two floating in it – usually making it spill over the side.

These are things I remember from my own childhood, and unconsciously, instinctively, I am passing them on to the next generation.

These common human experiences are what bind us together as a community. We recognise these shared traditions and experiences, and they are important because of their symbolic power. Shivering on the sidelines of a rugby game symbolises love and sacrifice, pride and parenthood. The rich aroma of the hot chocolate symbolises warmth and safety, love and nurturing.

As I travel around our nine rest homes meeting new staff, getting to know them and sharing our Vision and Values, I feel both proud and humbled to think how many of our staff have left their own homes and families, their own countries and cultures and traditions, to start a new life here in New Zealand. They are learning our ways and blending them with their own to form a new legacy.

The love and care they are creating and sharing in our homes is central to this process.

In the same way, each and every resident at our homes brings their own history and traditions with them to enrich our small communities.

Home is where the heart is, and where we all belong.

We visited the Yacht Club on a recent van trip to look at boats and watch the fishermen in action

Looking after winter woollies

Occasionally, no matter how much care is taken, a woollen jersey or cardigan slips through to the laundry and shrinks beyond recognition.

This is upsetting for all concerned, especially the family member who has hand-knitted or chosen the gift with love.

All care is taken in laundering clothes.

However, woollen clothing may be safer hand washed by family. When buying new woollen clothing please buy machine washable items.

If possible, we would prefer you to provide non woollen clothing that is easily washed when selecting winter clothing for your loved one.

The Winter Family Gathering is a highlight of our year
